ALL PHYSICIANS HEALTH GUARDS UNDER NEW PLAN

NEW YORK, N. Y., Dec. 1. Dr. Harvey Adams Moore of Indianapolis, who has been here attending the meeting of clinical surgeons in this city, explained to a reporter of The World a propaganda undertaken by the physicians of Indiana for social betterment by means of medical and surgical regulation. The movement has advanced so far that attorneys skilled in constitutional law have been retained to frame a measure for the next legislature. It will be designed to place all the families in the state under intimate hygienic control.

The project is broad and the drastic nature of some of its provisions is expected to arouse much opposition. But those behind it count on ultimate success because they believe the time is past for trifling with conditions that menace the general health, and they feel confident that public opinion will support laws vitally affecting the common welfare.

Under the scheme every physician will become a health officer, responsible to the authorities for the cleanliness of his district. Old ideas of prudishness will be put aside, and school children will be instructed as to things they should avoid to preserve mental and moral health. Marriage of persons unsuited for that relation will be prevented, to the end that the progeny of those who do marry may escape hereditary taint and thus promote communal and individual efficiency.

Dr. Moore has prepared an article on this subject to be printed in the Indianapolis Medical Journal. He treats it as an educational problem, which was first propounded by Edward Seguin soon after the French Revolution, and was afterward championed by Lombroso, dean of criminal anthropology, by de Vioanni, the medical anthropologist, and by Sergi, the pedagogical anthropologist. After these men had been neglected for many years Maria Montessori proved the efficacy of the theory, and the world is taking them up anew.

"Success depends wholly upon the co-operation of the medical profession," Dr. Moore says. "Educational methods deal with every child after it is born and apply the child's energy to its best advantage. The medical profession must consider the child before it is born; it must determine when and by whom children shall be born. In order that the educational system shall have fair opportunity the medical profession must watch every child that is permitted to be born, determining the causes of its every act, remedying its deficiencies and developing its possibilities."

"The war against social disease, especially insanity, pauperism and crime, has been carried on in the past upon a spectacular basis, with sensationalism as a result. The time when vice crusades, the religious revival, the ostrich-like sticking of the public head into the sand of ignorance, must be eliminated. It is to be a campaign of sanity, to be carried on in a careful manner. There is no sensationalism in its purpose and there can be none in its results."

While the normal child is developed in all its energies, Dr. Moore says, the plan will be to segregate the abnormal, so that its power for harm to the community is minimized. Marriage will be made a public institution in charge of medical officers. There will be no pursuit of the liquor dealer, but consumers of alcohol will be classified and treated accordingly. Thus responsibility for the entire social welfare is placed by express law upon the medical profession.

"In brief, the plan seems to me to place the medical profession," Dr. Moore concludes, "on the highest plane it has ever occupied, and to bring it nearer to the ideals of its founder than it has ever been. It is a move toward the brotherhood of man. While it sneaks of paternalism or socialism it must tend toward a vast increase in individual liberty. The greatest giving of personal liberty is in the giving of individual ability, and the whole spirit of the new movement is to increase the efficiency of mankind."

Olive Fremstad, prima donna of the Metropolitan opera house, narrowly escaped injury in an automobile accident. The machine in which she was riding struck a taxi and was thrown against a trolley car.

The recall started against Mayor Alexander of Los Angeles has been suddenly dropped. No special interest could be aroused.
